

A.D.D.I.E. Model Worksheet

This exercise will walk through the instructional design process, concentrating on the first three steps of the Addie model. The first task is to select a lesson to be taught. Ideally, this will be a subject you currently teach or will be planning to teach. While this paper makes a nice guide, you may find yourself using several more sheets of paper and drawing pictures.

Analysis What needs to be known? What problem needs to be fixed?

Who:

Why:

What:

Design

How can this topic be best taught? What ways can the content be organized? How can learning be evaluated?

Development

Develop a list of talent needed to accomplish above and their roles.

How long do you think it would take to develop?

Implementation

What will your classroom look like?

What organizational pieces need to be in place?

Evaluation

Formative Evaluation: What questions would you ask to see if the program?

Summative Evaluation: What question would you ask to see if the program worked like wanted and the learners met the objectives?